

We appreciate your interest in our organization and are committed to providing timely and accurate information to members of the press.

NIDS is a 501(C)(3) nonprofit “think tank” that provides deterrence education, national security analysis, and policy solutions. It informs involved or interested parties while advocating for peace through the responsible application of America’s vibrant nuclear deterrent. We are politically neutral.

Our media relations team is available to assist journalists with:

- Interviews with institution executives or subject matter experts
- Providing background information about our organization
- Supplying press releases and official statements
- Arranging site visits or access to events
- Facilitating requests for images, logos, or other media assets

We value transparency and aim to foster productive relationships with media members. If you require specific information or have a deadline, please let us know how we can assist you further.

Please contact our media relations team if you have a Media Request. We strive to respond promptly to all inquiries and accommodate requests whenever possible.

I appreciate your interest in the National Institute for Deterrence Studies. We look forward to collaborating with you to share our story accurately and effectively.

Join us to advance your knowledge and accelerate your media influence through an organization working to strengthen American democracy.
